Success of Racing Season Leads to Legalization Plan

Hot Springs Wants Legislature to Give It Legal Status

15,000 FINAL DAY

200,000 Persons Attend 27-Day Meet at Oaklawn Park

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—(AP)—Promoting a 27-day race meeting which daily attracted thousands from throughout Arkansas and outside the state, the Hot Springs Business Men's Racing association is now laying a campaign to legalize the long-dead sport before the next spring meet.

More than 15,000 persons witnessed the closing of the meet at Oaklawn last Saturday. Though attendance figures have not been given out, it is estimated that perhaps 200,000 passed through the gates during the meet.

"The races" became the universal topic of conversation in cities and cross-roads alike and the racing association which sponsored the meet expects the popularity of the revived sport to bring about a change of sentiment toward racing in the legislature.

Is Large Success

Arranged on short notice, the meet drew so many fans that it was extended from a twenty-one day to a twenty-seven day event.

"The success of the meet," says Douglas Hotchkiss, secretary of the business men's racing association," has been universally acclaimed. There is no doubt but what it has benefited Hot Springs as a resort."

In addition, he says, "it buoyed up our people, stimulated business and brought us an additional patronage which we could not have obtained through any other source." He thinks it also has "been the medium of building a close sentiment and friendship between the people generally of Arkansas and the people of Hot Springs."

"We very much desire to have racing legislation in Arkansas," he says. "If the state of Arkansas will give us legislation, the state will profit, and through an honest racing commission, we would have the authority to regulate the sport in a strict manner, and we believe that the legalizing of racing in Arkansas would bring unmeasured and continued prosperity to Hot Springs."

To Expand Park

Meanwhile, the owners of Oaklawn park have announced plans for enlarging the plant before the next meet. An extension is to be built in front of the grandstand to give spectators a better view of the race finishes, and the south end of the stand may be extended to the paddock.

A better class of horses is looked for by the racing association officials at the next meet. When plans for the meet just ended were announced, many of the better horses were quartered at other winter tracks in Florida, New Orleans and on the west coast. With the sport revived, they believe that next winter some of the best horses in the country can be brought here.

Charges Director Broke Her Heart

Sally Eilers Hears Other Woman Accuse Director-Husband

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—(AP)—Stories of night club and yacht parties, kisses, expensive automobiles, apartment trysts, avowals of devotion and a proposal of marriage were told from the witness stand today by Marjorie Whiteis of the screen in her $100,000 suit charging Harry Joe Brown, movie director, jilted her and broke her heart.

As Sally Eilers, actress wife of Brown, listened intently, Miss Whiteis, whose screen name is Marjorie Gay, said the director proposed marriage in 1929. She said they later looked at furniture and planned the sort of house they would have.

Then last spring Brown and Miss Eilers became frequent companions. Brown explained this by saying Miss Eilers could help him in his career, Miss Whiteis said.

Brown's bride of last September—the former wife of Hoot Gibson, cowboy actor—stiffened at this point in the testimony and gazed piercingly at the witness.

Describing what she said was the marriage proposal scene, Miss Whiteis said she sat on the floor of Brown's apartment reading poetry while he shaved. He came and sat down beside her, she said, and asked her to rub his head.

Marjorie, I love you more than anyone—I want you to marry me," she quoted Brown as saying.

Long Cursed by New Orl'ns Gambler

'Kingfish' Accuses Revenue Nominee of Running Pool

Colonel Sullivan Mutters Oath, Long Orders It Into Record

Kentucky Horse Fancier Admits He's Garden-Variety Gambler

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senator Huey P. Long was cursed Wednesday at the senate hearing, and said, "Let it go into the record."

Before a crowd that jammed the hearing on the confirmation of D. D. Moore as internal revenue collector in Louisiana, Roosevelt nominee who is opposed by Long, the senator so aroused Colonel John P. Sullivan, of New Orleans, that the latter muttered, "You know you can't prove that, you rotten, etc., etc."

Sullivan's face was livid. He cursed Long under his breath but loud enough for Long to hear.

The official reporter for the committee said he did not hear the profanity and it would not be a part of the official record.

A remark by Senator Long that Colonel E. R. Bradley and Sullivan has "their own betting kitty, in which they bet, and have their system of adding, multiplying and subtracting bets at the expense of the suckers of the United States" led to the exchange of profanity.

Bradley a Gambler

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Asked by the senate finance commitee Wednesday what his business was, Colonel E. R. Bradley, Kentucky sportsman, said he was a dealer in race horses and a gambler.

Asked if his gambling was confined to racing, Bradley said he gambled on anything.

Bradley was questioned during a hearing on the confirmation of D. D. Moore as internal revenue collector in Louisiana.

Senator Long, of Louisiana, has charged since Moore's appointment that the revenue office is dominated by Colonel John P. Sullivan, New Orleans sportsman, and that Sullivan and Bradley are partners in the operation of a string of Southern gambling houses.

Earlier, Maurice Gatlin former Sullivan employe, testified that Sullivan was connected with bookmaking.

Bradley said he did not know Moore and had nothing to do with his appointment.

Mission Reports Presented on Second Day of M.E. Conference

200 Women Registered in Hope at 22nd Annual Meeting of Missionary Society of Little Rock Conference

With approximately 200 guests and with others arriving during the morning the 22nd meeting of the Little Rock Annual Conference began the second day of its work Wedesday at First Methodist church with a period of worship led by Mrs. W. P. McDermott.

Mrs. McDermott read from Moses' charge to Joshua, emphasizig the call to "go up and possess the land," as a summons to the present generation of Christian people. Preceding the period of worship Mrs. Ralph Routon gave an organ number, "Morning Song" by Johnstone.

Proceeding with the reports from the districts, each of the secretaries reported. Mrs. Fred Harrison gave the report of Arkadelphia district, Ms. Guy Patterson for Camden, Mrs. W. O. Clark for Little Rock, Mrs. W. C. Watson for Pine Bluff, Mrs. H. T. Rucks for Monticello, Mrs. Wilson Hale for Prescott, Mrs. W. L. Phillips for Texarkana.

Mrs. Phillips struck a characteristic note of much of the work that is little known to the public when she said:

"Sometimes I receive reports that bring tears of joy to my eyes. They indicate a sacrificial interest in the work. That is especially true of our rural work. You know, a large part of the work in our district is in the open country. I know women who work in the field all day and at evening takes her daughters and walks several miles to the women's meeting. There is another, who after the day's work, takes a wagon and team and for five mile son the way to her church gathers up women to go with her to the woman's meeting of her auxiliary. There are women in our district who have actually done without clothes they needed and made other real sacrifices in order to have something to give for the cause we love."

Summary of Year

After the reports, Mrs. J. M. Stinson, conference secretary, gave a summary of the work of the conference for the year. The reports showed gains in most departments of the work. There are 12 new auxiliaries, making a total of 159 in the conference. There was a gain of 692 members, making a total membership at the present time of 5,440. There are 71 children's societies ,with a membership of 1,395. The women of the church have had a movement on to give old gold and silver for the cause of missions. She did not give the amount as coming from the conference, but reported that $26,-

Council Approves Dynamo Purchase

$40,000 Generator Is Now Up to Board of Public Affairs

Authority to invest the municipal water &light plant's depreciation fund in a new electric generator was given the board of public affairs Tuesday night by Hope city council.

Purchase of the $40,000 machine, for which the city has on hand between $30,000 and $31,000, is up to the three members of the board of public affairs, Lloyd Spencer, C. C. Spragins and Mayor R. A. Boyett, who are charged by law with passing upon all purchases over $100 for the city government.

The new generator is sorely needed, according to Manager George Sandefur of the municipal plant, for when the city's 1,000 KWH generator is called upon to pull the heavy Saturday night load the city has no auxiliary machine of sufficient capacity to fall back upon in case of mechanical trouble.

A wage increase of 10 per cent effective April 1, totalling $165 per month, was granted by the city council to employes of the municipal plant. Previously they had been cut twice, 10 per cent each time, and only half the total cut is restored.

Last fall a similar increase was given the city's police force, restoring part of the previous wage cuts.

The council voted an increase in salary of $15 per month for City Clerk T. R. Billingsley, raising his compensation from $60 to $75 per month.

The street committee met with the board of public affairs Wednesday morning at which time the board recommended the purchase of a new tractor for the city.

The committee was to meet again Wednesday afternoon and complete the deal, trading the city's old tractor in on the purchase prcie of the new one. Cost of the new tractor was quoted as approximately $1,600.

Other business with the council Tuesday night was to waive a license fee for the Hila Morgan show which is scheduled to appear here under auspices of the Hope fire department.

The council closed its session with recommendations that all monthly bills be paid.

CCC Camp Up to Blevins Meeting

U. S. Camp and Delight Bridge to Be Discussed Thursday Night

A mass meeting of north Hempstead county citizens, with an invitation to representatives of Hope to attend, has been called for 7:30 o'clock Thursday night at Blevins High School to consider plans for a federal CCC camp in the north end of the county.

It is represented to The Star that one such camp is to be located in this section of Arkansas, and if the acreage is available the camp may be placed in this county.

Hope is expected to send a committee to the Blevins meeting with a view to using the CCC camp location as an aid in bringing about an equitable adjustment of the Little Missouri river bridge controversy.

Such a camp, serving the boys of several counties, would be made more easily available if the proposed county bridge were located to serve three counties intead of two, it was pointed out.

Shareholders Not Told of Bonuses

Mitchell Testifies in Civil Action by National City Stockholders

NEW YORK—Charles E. Mitchell testified in the New York Supreme Court Tuesday that stockholders of the National City bank were neither consulted nor informed about the bonus system established for executives of the National City Company in 1921. From 1921 to 1929 large sums were distributed under this system, Mr. Mitchell, himself, was the largest beneficiary.

The former head of both the National City bank and the National City Company was called as a witness in the stockholders' action brought against directors and former directors of the bank who allegedly have cost the institution $70,000,000 through mismanagement during the past 10 or 12 years.

Mr. Mitchell discussed his 17 years' association with the bank and its affiliate, the New National City, and then underwent examination by David L. Podell, lawyer for Mrs. Celia Gallin, the nominal plaintiff, as to "melons" which the officers and directors of the company cut between 1921 and 1931.

"Was the resolution which brought about the profit-taking ever submitted at a meeting of, or in writing to the stockholders or certificate holders?" Mr. Podell asked.

"No," Mitchell said. "the matter never was presented to the stockholders."

Mr. Mitchell concluded his testimony with the statement that between 1921 and 1931 he and two other officers of the bank and company received an aggregate of $9,000,000

Local Postoffice Deliveries to Be Reduced to July 1

Afternoon Deliveries in Residential Section Are Discontinued

TO KEEP IN BUDGET

4-Day Furlough Order Issued, Postmaster Davis Explains Wednesday

City mail deliveries in the residential sections of Hope will be discontinued in the afternoon, effective immediately, until July 1, Postmaster J. A. Davis announced Wednesday.

The order limiting city deliveries to the morning only is made necessary by the government's effort to keep the Postoffice Department within its budget, forcing a furlough of postal workers everywhere, Mr. Davis said. Deliveries in the business district, and on the rural mail routes, won't be affected by the reduction order.

Postmaster's Statement

His statement follows:

"In order to keep expenditures of the Postoffice Department within budget allotments the Postmaster General has issued an order furloughing all presidential postmasters, officials, and employes in postoffices, except rural carriers, four days during the remainder of the fiscal year, whcih ends June 30, 1934, and has authorized postmasters to curtail service to the extent necessary to grant the furlough.

"It will be necessary at this office to curtail service to some extent, especially in the city delivery service. Deliveries in residential sections will be limited to one daily, and in the business district to two daily. Of course there may be days that it will not be necessary to curtail service to that extent. We will give the fullest service possible every day.

"In cases of emergency where patrons of the city delivery service are expecting important mail in the afternoon we will be glad to hand it out to them if they will call at the postoffice. However, it should be born in mind that we are furloughing the clerical force also and are short on help in the office.

"The cooperation of the public is solicited during the emergency period, which will last only until July 1, after which full and complete service wil be resumed."

Two Cities Vote for Civil Service

Texarkana, Ark., and Pine Bluff to Reorganize Fire and Policemen

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—Pine Bluff voters Tuesday adopted civil service for the police and fire departments, retained the city occupation tax ordinance and ratified an ordinance allowing the substitution of buses for street cars in the general election in which the Democratic nominees for city offices were almost unanimously elected.

The civil service measure, opposed by the city administration, carried, 843 to 455. An initiated ordinance to repeal the city occupation tax was defeated 819 to 482. The ordinance allowing the Arkansas Power & Light Company to substitute buses for street cars under a three-year franchise was ratified, 739 to 560.

Civil Service Texarkana

TEXARKANA.—Civil service regulations to govern employment of members of the police and fire departments were approved by the citizens of Texarkana, Ark., in the election held Tuesday, the vote being 210 in favor of civil service and 40 against.

All nominees for municipal posts were confirmed, being formally elected to the places for which they were candidates.

Willis B. Smith was re-elected city attorney and C. E. Vinson as city clerk, each receiving a vote of 251.

The four aldermen were re-elected with the following vote: W. D. Sullivan, ward one, 60; P. Temple, ward two, 73; John W. Holman, ward three, 75; E. C. Seibert, ward four, 44.

The civil service proposition was submitted in accordance with an act of the legislature which made possible the adoption of a civil service plan but did not make it mandatory. The question to be decided was whether or not the citizens of Texarkana, Ark., desired the act to be made effective in Texarkana. Acceptance of the proposal means that a board of civil service commissioners will be set up to have control of the officers and employes of the police and fire department.

Uncompleted CWA Jobs Resubmitted

Water Mains, Elm Paving, Brookwood Fence Among Projects

City projects unfinished when the CWA program closed last Saturday, will be the first submitted for approval under the new program of the State Emergency Relief Commission, R. B. Stanford, work supervisor, announced Wednesday.

Personnel of the works division were busy working up transfer plans to submit for approval to continue work on the city water mains, repairs to Elm street paving, repairs to Shover Street negro school, and the erection of a high wire fence at Brookwood school to protect children from the flow of traffic on Highway 67.

These projects will be the first submitted, Mr. Stanford said. He hopes to obtain approval this week in order that work may start Monday.

Under the new program Hempstead county will be appropriated a certain amount of money, based on population. This amount is to extend the program the balance of this year.

On account of the many details that have to be worked out at state headquarters in Little Rock to set the new program in motion, no money allotments to the 75 counties has been announced.

No information of the rural rehabilitation program in Hempstead county in which J. R. Henry is county administrator, was made public Wednesday.

Mr. Henry was busy obtaining further details before announcing the intricate system under the new program which deals with relief aid to rural families.

8 Clydesdales, Ton Apiece, Will Advertise Budweiser Beer

LITTLE ROCK—Twenty thousand pounds of horse-flesh will arrive in Little Rock Wednesday and Thursday Little Rock will see a sight it hasn't seen in many years—an eight-horse hitch snaking a beer wagon through the streets.

The Anheuser-Bush Company of St. Louis is sending the outfit here to advertise Budweiser beer.

The stable consists of 10 horses, two of which are "spares." They average a ton each and stand 16 to 18 hands. They are Clydesdales, imported from Scotland and Canada.

Their driver is Billy Wales, a famous circus driver, who can turn the eight-horse hitch on a dime and have a nickel to spare. The wagon is mounted with brass and the harness, weighing 1,200 pounds, is trimmed with brass and chromium.

The Clydesdales are all prize winners, and have enough ribbons, cups and other trophies to cover the walls of their stables. The wheel horses are Lindy and Director. The others in the regular hitch are Sundial and Shamrock, Wallace and Teddy, Brookdale and Duncan. The extra horses are Chancellor and Controller.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Worst Snag of All Hit by AAA on Dairy Control . . . Coolidge's Friend Boosts Brain Trust . . . Officials Draw Blank in Sweepstakes . . . Foes of Munition Inquiry Rally Forces.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Brain trusters finally have met a problem which proved too tough for them.

They think the new dairy control plan is the most vulnerable of the crop reduction programs. But they couldn't conjure up a better one.

AAA submits the plan with fear, if not trembling. It asks milk and butter producers to say whether they want it or not. The previous milk plan and other dairy efforts collapsed.

After months of the most terrific brain-wrenching in New Deal history, participated in by all hands at AAA, out popped this one as a last resort.

Secretary Wallace and AAA Administrator Davis are cool toward it. Proponents have worked hard, thus far vainly, to get the approval of Consumers' Counsel Fred Howe. Chief backers of the plan within AAA are two minor administrators, Alfred D. Stedman and H. R. Tolley.

AAA jitters were revealed when, of the first two dairy industry representatives to assail the plan violently, one was barred from the Department of Agriculture and the other officially and publicly castigated.

American farmers get nearly 25 per cent of their income from milk—three times more than from wheat, so any national milk plan is important.

The plan would curb marketing of milk by 15 per cent. It involves benefit payments of $165,000,000 to $300,000,000 to farmers reducing sales, and process taxes of half a cent a quart on milk and five cents a pound on butter.

It would distribute some milk to underfed city children, kill diseased cows, and redistribute healthy cows to needy farmers.

Without the plan, AAA says, dairy farmers face new and more serious distress. But difficulties involving administration, farmer co-operation, and consumer reaction lie ahead.

About six billion pounds of milk are sold by farmers marketing their own. Farmers probably won't drink surplus milk and cow-killing adds to the meat control problem.

Average milk consumption is well below adequate diet standards; if everybody had enough milk, we'd need 15 million more cows. Increased prices invariably reduce consumption.

Boost for Brain Trust

Imagine what Cal Coolidge would be thinking and saying about the brain trust were he alive! But one of the best, soundest defenses of it comes from a Coolidge friend and appointee out of conservative Vermont, Chief Counsel Robert E. Healy of the Federal Trade Commission.

Healy says the only brain trust lawyers heretofore have been those who wrote and rewrote the nation's corporation laws "until they are in a mess that stinks like the stable of mythology."

Now, he says, expert legal manipulators come here to find government lawyers as expert as themselves. "Champions of the people," he calls the brain trust lawyers now attacked by big business.

Healy is the tall, gray, bald New Englander who has been exposing "power trust" propaganda and other shady practices for several years. The power lobbyists made a death fight to get the late Senator Tom Walsh's utilities investigation shunted to the dormant FTC.

They had the shock of their lives when they there ran into Healy, who has since made one damaging exposure after another.

Recently he revealed how Cities Service Securities Corporation had sold investigators $1,100,000,000 of stock, putting only 80 millions into working capital and the rest into the New York curb exchange to keep the stock active.

Draw Sweepstakes Blank

Officials here who played the Irish Sweepstakes obtained their tickets through the kind but altogether informal auspices of the Irish legation.

None of them won anything, but a young room clerk at the Mayflower hotel picked up $3600.

"Patriots" Fight Probe

Senator Nye's resolution for a munitions investigation is likely to come to a vote in the Senate, though members from munitions-manufacting states are fighting it hard.

Records of the last Congress show that group voted 100 per cent for building the navy to treaty limits and 100 per cent both against reduction of 2000 army officers and abolition of the C.M.T.C.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Look for Signs of Ill-Health in the Under-grade Child—He May Be Retared by Sickness

If a child is unwilling or cross, parents are prone to lay it to character. But ill-health may be the cause, as Olive Roberts Barton points out in this article in her series on Child Training.

There is an old saying that a person is no better than his stomach. I can vouch for the truth of this. I lay most of my sins of omission and commission to the fact that I have never been "strong," the result of two devastating illnesses in childhood.

No one can write from the heart, or with conviction, who has not had this experience. The strong, well person cannot have the gift of understanding the misery or discouragement of chronic weakness. Even parents, although they are sympathetic and worried, cannot possibly interpret the struggle such a child goes through. The well never understand the sick, and the most heartless (unintentionally) people are those who have never been in bed a day in their lives.

Such people acknowledge illness only when it has a "name" and the patient is tucked between sheets with the doctor stopping at the door each day. But it just happends that a certain physical defect is not so dramatized. It goes by no name, or is not recognized at all.

Age and Youth

Old, middle-aged and young often walk with one or seven devils tearing at them somewhere and yet the world expects these weak chemical engines to pull the train up hill and down dae with the same speed and energy as their more fortunate neighbors. We make allowance for age, and even middle-life. But we make almost no allowance for children.

Actually the majority of children are healthy, but if we knew the truth, there are thousands trying to carry on the daily burden of school and home resposibility that are not fit for it.

Sometimes recuperation after a severe illness takes months. Even the most sympathetic and understanding mother will begin to worry after a while about school and she may say something like this: "You're missing so much. It's going to be hard to make up. I think by Monday or Tuesday you'd better be starting on your back work and I'll send for your books."

Lowering Resistance

Jimmy lies in bed and worries, or creeps about the house and worries. Then finally he gets at back lessons when his mind is in no state to be driven, or his body, either. And so the records of the school won't look too scuttled, and to avoid the humiliation of not passing, he studies or is sent back to school before he is quite ready. The reserve gained is used up. He loses interest in all school work, his appetite goes and tonics are resorted to to build him up.

Then we are terribly surprisedwhen a month or two later the child who was so well before goes down with a second illness, something entirely different, perhaps, but directy traceable to the first attack, as reduced vitality and defense leave the small body vulnerable to germs that suddenly become pathological.

We are told that the mind itself, as a thinking machine, does not tire, but however true this may be, the brain is a physical as well as a mental organ and depends upon good blood and nourishment, and must be free of a trainload of worries to do its work.

Health Behind Behavior

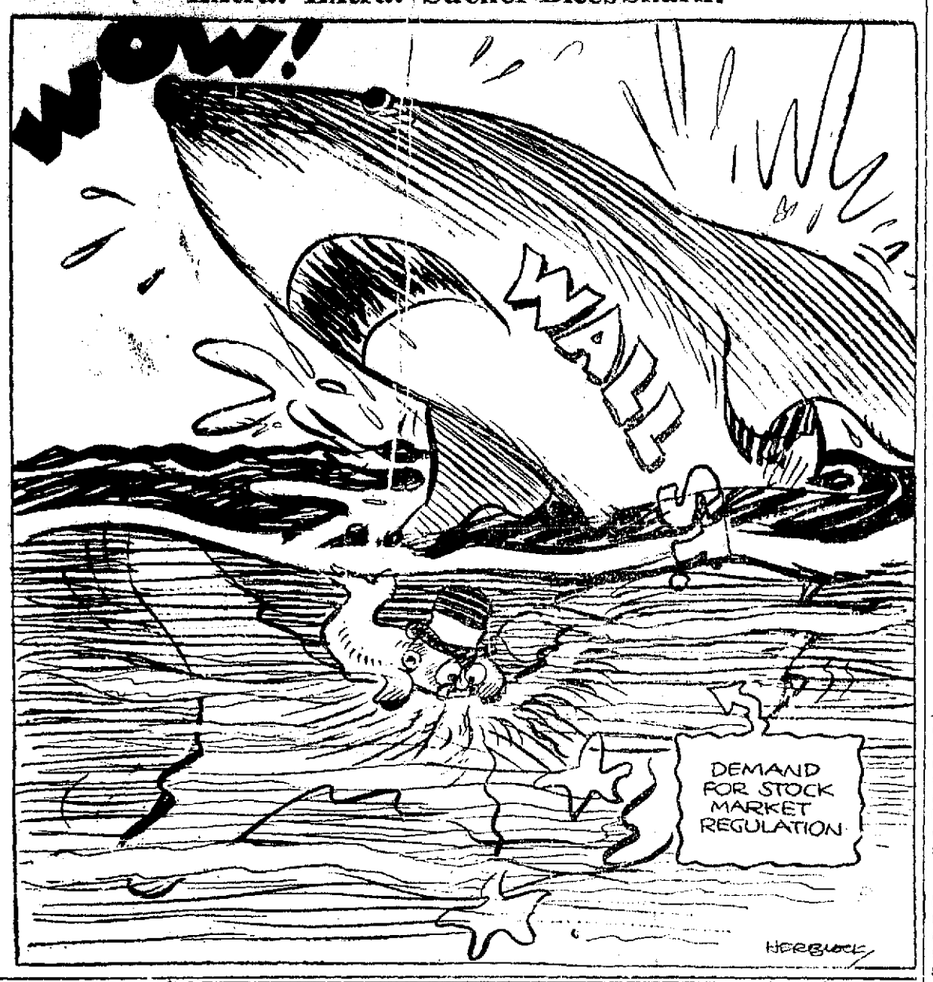

In the last five years, conditions have been adverse to child health and happiness, poor environment, food lacking in chemical variety, or even wanting altogether, and illness receiving scant attention. The general health of our children has been depleted. Are they fit, therefore, to carry on as usual? Can schools expect no holes in their reports? Can parents expect the same normal conduct and happy behavior?

Not as I see it.

As long as a child is up and about we take it for granted he is well. He is naturally courageous and energetic, so his pallor, or sunken eyes deceive us. If he is slow or unwilling or cross, we lay it to character. Some of it may be, but mountains of it can be laid to the door of health. The under-grade child is too often a martyr to our blindness. And it is a terrible, terrible pity.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

PABLITO, a handsome youth, becomes a fugitive when he flees from Key West to Havana with BEAU and LOTTIE, two thieves. Pablito has been accused of a murder he did not commit. He is in love with ESTELLE FIELD, daughter of rich JIM FIELD, but feels he has exiled himself from her forever.

In Havana he becomes celebrated as a boxer and he and Beau open a gymnasium.

SIR AUBREY, a titled Englishman and Pablito's father, is searching for his son, employing BILLINGS, New York detective.

Three years pass and then Pablito and Estelle meet again. They admit their love for each other.

MARCIA TREADWAY who is visiting the Fields could prove Pablito was not the murderer but has remained silent, fearing scandal.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXX

J. SMITHSON BILLINGS was in Havana. It was the first week of March and so hot that Cuban senoras and their daughters were beginning to long for the time when they could don the light raiment that the mad tourists wore throughout the winter.

Billings was going to pay another visit to the woman who, before her marriage, had been Concepcion Villaverde y Blanco. He knew that unless you traveled the same road many times you could not be sure that every stone had been turned over. Then he was going to Key West again to hunt up the filthy old crone called Angela. And this time he would see to it that she did not escape him. He felt a curious and comfortable sense of having at last set out on the right course.

He whistled as he dressed on that early March morning and for some moments he studied the pattern of colors on the tiled floor. The pattern was made by sunlight sifting through the colored glass of half of an inward-opening window.

As a child, visiting his aunt, Billings remembered gazing into a remarkable kaleidoscope. He had loved to watch the changing patterns which a twist or a shake of the object produced. The colors on the tiled floor made him think of that kaleidoscope.

He adjusted his tie carefully, studied his face in the mirror and then assumed the expression which he thought most becoming — a rather fierce expression made more impressive because his head was thrown back and his shoulders held high. Billings liked to look like a man who was not to be trifled with.

He studied himself for some minutes, hands in his pockets and then out. He frowned, assumed an expression less severe, nodded and then smiled. There are few of us who do not occasionally indulge in such manifestations of human frailty.

Then he went down stairs to his breakfast, stopping on the way to buy a newspaper that was printed in English.

READING while he waited for the food, he saw on the last page of the newspaper that there was to be a prize fight at the end of the week between the Juanito of whom he had often heard and one Al Gates, hailing from London. Billings decided he would take in the match, then turned to another page.

The fight was to be at La Miraflores, a club run by millionaires. It would probably be a rather restricted affair but Billings was sure he could gain admittance.

An American strolled into the dining room, proclaiming his nationality by his shoes and clothing and that haste that cannot be forgotten even in leisure. He saw Billings and paused beside his table.

"American?" the newcomer questioned, with an eye on Billings' tightly encased shoulders and Graziati-tailored clothes.

"Yes. Fine morning."

"Yes, but it's going to be a scorcher again if I know anything about it."

"Likely. Sit down, won't you?"

"Thanks. My wife takes her breakfast in bed and I don't like eating alone, even if I read the paper. At home she gets up but she says she's on a vacation now. I guess she deserves it. You know how hard it is to get help. We haven't had a cook for more than 10 days in the last 10 years!"

"Too bad," Billings agreed solemnly. "It's the same with me and my wife."

The stranger ordered ham, eggs, a pot of "decent coffee if you have any," and hot rolls. Then he sat back in his chair. "What's the news?" he questioned, his eyes on Billings' newspaper, now folded beside the steamed carafe.

Billings told Mr. Gartside—whose card he had taken to slip into a case as he handed his own card across the table—that there was to be a fight.

MR. GARTSIDE had known that and said he was going if he could manage it.

"Ever seen this Juanito?" he asked. Billings shook his head.

"Well, he's the queerest looking fellow for a Cuban you ever laid your eyes on. Blond as they make 'em. Blue eyes, too."

"That so?" Billings asked. His face was losing a little of its morning thickness and he leaned across the table.

"Does he have any relatives here? I mean this Juanito?"

"Well, they say an old woman back in the country claims him as her son but I've heard that's just a story. Made up for some reason."

"Is that so?"

"Yes. Funny place, Havana."

"Yes."

"By the way, what's your line, Mr. Billings? I'm in plumbing. Newark's my home. I suppose you've been in Newark?"

"Many times. Fine, progressive city."

"A city of beautiful homes," said Mr. Gartside heavily.

They talked in a desultory way after that and finally, with promises to meet again soon, separated. Billings went outside where he ordered a fotingo to take him to Juanito's gymnasium of which Mr. Gartside had told him. He was rather oppressed on the trip; he hated exercise.

The visit gave him no reward Juanito was not to be seen and a harsh voiced product of the Bowery ordered Billings to "Speed up! Speed up!" After that the same voice ordered him into a chamber where he was mercilessly pummeled, subjected to ice water from a large nozzled hose and otherwise tortured. Billings returned to Havana utterly limp and angry over his failure.

"My God!" he thought, lurching from side to side in the taxi cab and mopping his brow. "My God, that was fierce!"

HE ate a light luncheon and, although still very uncomfortable, pursued his quest. The boy at the counter spoke English. "By the way," Billings said after some conversation about the weather, "what's the name of the mother of this Juanito, the big fighter? I'm a newspaper man and I thought I might get a story out of her. You know people like to hear of a mother's influence, which—take it from me, kid—may be a beautiful thing!"

The boy at the counter, who had picked up his English from roving Americans, agreed, "Sure!" He did not, he said, shaking his head, know the name of Juanito's mother. But, he added quickly, he would be able to find out.

The boy came back, announcing that the name of Juanito's mother was Julia. She was called Tia Julia and she lived out near Cienfuegos. It was some distance but one could easily make the trip and it was a trip worth making.

"All right," Billings said carelessly as he jotted down some notes in the small book he carried. Then he bestowed a tip and turned toward a spot from which, at a cool, shining-topped table, he ordered a dry Martini.

He was going to Cienfuegos tomorrow, wild goose chase or not.

But the next day's dawn was pink and purple and by the hour when Billings opened his heavy eyelids rain was falling. It was cold, too—one of those amazingly abrupt changes of temperature that are typical of warm countries having occurred during the night.

Going to Cinefuegos on such a day was out of the question. Billings must, he knew, go there as a sightseer who happened in a casual visit to stop to talk with the neighbors of Tia Julia. He wished fervently that he know the language he heard on the streets through which he sometimes strolled, swinging a recently acquired cane with rather too many flourishes.

Billings dressed with many groans, being acutely stiff. He ate his breakfast at 11. When the skies cleared a bit, he decided, he would go to Morro Castle. He had never been there and it was one of the things that, in Havana, simply had to be done.

Sister MARY'S KITCHEN

Breakfast for Child and Adult
By SISTER MARY
NEA Service Staff Writer

Thinking up variations year in and year out for three square meals a day—it's a career all by itself, even if the census makers and other statisticians do persist in putting the housewife down as one with no occupation.

Breakfasts are particularly difficult, if we are to judge by the letters that come to this desk voicing plaintive calls for help. A good many families slight the first meal of the day because they don't feel up to eating so early in the morning. That is a mistake. Workers and children alike need the background of hot tempting food in the morning. Perhaps one reason they do not want it is that the breakfast is not always tempting. Yet even the very light one can be made so if the home-maker cares enough.

Tomorrow's Menu

Breakfast: Grape juice with lemon juice, cereal, cream, eggs poached in milk on graham toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon: Cream of spinach soup, croutons, onion sandwiches, apple tapioca pudding with lemon sauce, milk, tea.

Dinner: Slice of ham baked in milk, corn croquettes, kale with lemon butter, jellied pineapple and carrot salad, maple custard, milk, coffee.

Kinds of Breagfasts

The very light breakfast includes fruit, some sort of bread—such as toast or rolls, and a beverage—milk, cocoa or coffee. This type of meal is suitable for adults whose habits are sedentary and who eat adequate noon meals.

The slightly heavier, though still light breakfast adds cereal to the above. This meal is convenient because it provides the essentials of the children's breakfast and takes care of adults who are moderately active physically.

The medium breakfast consists of fruit, cereal, eggs or their equivalent, bread and beverage. It is suitable for school children, adults who are active physically and those who take very little luncheon at noon.

The heavy breakfast adds an extra hot dish to the medium breakfast menu. Persons who are engaged in strenuous muscular work and those whose total food requirements for the day are high need this kind of meal.

For Inactive Persons

Keeping these classifications in mind, it is simple to plan one breakfast menu which will meet the needs of all members of a family no matter how diversified their interests. The inactive person may merely refuse the extra dishes and concentrate on the light or medium items.

The child's breakfast should furnish every necessary element for proper nourishment. His stomach has been without food for the longest period during the twenty-four hours, and is ready for a meal which will supply food for energy since an active child uses up a vast amount of nervous and muscular energy during the day. Fruit or fruit juice, hot or cold cereal with cream or top milk, milk or cocoa made with milk, toast and a soft cooked egg makes a full-balanced breakfast for a growing child.

Congress Orders Power Rate Probe

Norris-Rankin Resolution Is Adopted by Both Houses

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The Norris-Rankin resolution authorizing an investigation of public utility rates by the Federal Power Commission was adopted Wednesday by the house, completing congressional action.

Connally Vs. Dickinson

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Activties of the "brain trust" and the Wirt revolution charges figured Tuesday in a sharply worded senate debate which turned senatorial minds toward the approaching elections.

An attack on administration policies by Senator Dickinson, Republican, Iowa, was challenged by Byrnes, Democrat, South Carloina, and Connally, Democrat, Texas. Connally said the Iowa senator was "trying to open the Republican congressional campaign."

Connally drew laughter from the galleries when he said the Iowa senator reminded him "of a swamp owl—the more light you throw around his head the blindor he gets."

Dickinson, Connally said, had predicted the Democratic party was going to wreck the Treasury and had said he was going to help it.

"Such a statement," he added, "is unworthy of a senator or one who parades as a senator."

"I have always stood for a conservative budget," Dickinson retored. "I said the only thing that would bring you to your senses would be a collapse of the federal finances. You are on your way but you don't know where you are going."

"We are on the way out of the terrible mess in which the senator and his party left us last March," Connally responded.

"Is the senator complaining because corn out in Iowa where the tall corn grows and the short politicians grow—is selling at twice what it was?" Connally asked. "Tugwell isn't running the government any more than the senator from Iowa is, thank God," the Texas senator added.

Galleries Amused

Connally had the galleries in an uproar of laughter as he asserted, after Dickinson had denied mentioning Dr. Wirt, he could "see the halo of Dr. Wirt around the silvery hair of the senator from Iowa."

"Dr. Wirt," said the Texan, "is nothing but a sensation monger who wants to make the headlines. Either Dr. Wirt was in on the conspiracy and betrayed the conspirators or is a base betrayer of confidences."

Connally said the rules of the senate prevented him from expressing his opinion of the Wirt assertion that "brain trusters' had told him Roosevelt was to be replaced by a Stalin, but added:

"Of course it's pure moonshine. This talk about a conspiracy is all bunk. If lifting the country back on the highway of prosperity is revolution then we've had a revolution."

Dr. William A. Wirt is a Gary (Ind.) educator.

Started by Borah

The debate developed out of a protest by Senators Borah, Republican, Idaho, and Johnson, Republican, California, against the processing tax on jute bags. They did not criticize the administration, but blamed congress for delegating taxing powers.

Dickinson followed with an attack on the farm program, predicting it would result in a deficit for the current fiscal year of $544,000,000 or more than twice the Farm Board loss for which he said the Hoover administration was condemned.

Byrnes called attention to Dickinson's support of increased appropriations for veterans and federal employes and challenged him to cite any appropriation he had voted to reduce.

the cigarette that TASTES BETTER

—what it means

—to keep on hand 350,000 bales of Turkish tobacco

to add something to the taste

So important is Turkish tobacco in the Chesterfield blend that we maintain a modern up-to-date tobacco factory in the far-off city of Smyrna.

Turkish tobacco adds something to the taste and aroma of a cigarette that no other tobacco can give.

It means something that Chesterfield always has in storage upwards of 350,000 bales of this aromatic Turkish leaf.

This Turkish tobacco is blended and cross-blended with ripe mild home-grown tobaccos to give Chesterfields a taste and aroma that is not like other cigarettes.

Everything that money can buy is used to make Chesterfield the cigarette that's milder, the cigarette that tastes better.
